

SIGCHI & acm

ACM SIGCHI's scope consists of the study of the human-computer interaction process and includes research and development efforts leading to the design and evaluation of user interfaces. SIGCHI serves as a forum for the exchange of ideas among computer scientists, human factors scientists, psychologists, social scientists, systems designers and end users. SIGCHI sponsors the annual CHI conference, co-sponsors additional conferences and workshops, and offers its members "Member Plus" publication packages. Interactions magazine, the SIGCHI Bulletin newsletter, and access to SIGCHI Publications in the ACM Digital Library is included with SIGCHI membership.

The Association for Computing Machinery (ACM) is a not for profit educational and scientific computing society. Benefits include a subscription to Communications of the ACM, Membernet, discounts on books and conferences, and the option to subscribe to the ACM Digital Library (www.acm.org/dl).
